KEEP THE MONEY AT HOME.

THIS is the time for Postmaster-General Burleson to issue an order extending the limit of postal savings deposits so an individual may carry more than $500 to his credit. This paltry limitation is one of the puerile policies of the administration and one that cannot be understood from an economic standpoint. For years the foreign population in the United States has been sending thousands of dollars to the government banks in the old country for the single reason that the government of this country, through the postal savings banks, has not extended thrifty citizens means of placing their savings where they would be out of the reach of speculators and immune from the hazards of ordinary business. The limitation placed on the depositor has no justification in common sense and was adopted apparently with a view of restricting the benefits of the system to a class of very small hoarders. This compelled the public to look for other means of investment and foreigners naturally turned to their own countries, where they found the government was willing to accept every dollar committed to its care. The bars should be lifted from the senseless plan of preventing men and women from saving more than $500 and give them an opportunity to place all they can save in custody of the government. This is an appropriate time for the change to be made effective, since foreigners residing in this country find themselves deprived of the privilege of sending money home to their own fatherland. The treasury department has been exercised over the depletion of gold reserves yet the postoffice department, which has the chance of a lifetime in its hands, is wilfully blind to the wants of the people. An illustration of the eagerness of Europeans to patronize the United States post office was offered the first week of hostilities when post office deposits in New York more than doubled through curtailment of the privilege of sending away vast sums that had been going out of the postal savings banks of other nations.

Lift the bars at once and keep this money at home. It does not take the funds out of circulation, for they are immediately committed to the care of the nearest United States depository, which pays a small rate of interest for the privilege of using the funds guaranteed by the post office savings department. In the case of an office like Tonopah the deposits could be increased fifty per cent if the saving classes met with some encouragement instead of being importuned to buy a low rate bond that cannot be promptly converted into cash. With help of this nature the crowd at the money order window and at the office of Wells Fargo would be thinned out and the line of depositors at the postal savings wicket would be materially swollen.

PROFITS FROM THE WAR.

"DON'T sell your seed at any price" is the warning issued by the Nevada Sugar company to beet sugar growers. This is a welcome announcement, as it is the precursor of a campaign by which the local sugar factory may be brought to a paying basis and the farmers be shown the way to add immensely to their earnings by cultivating the beet of German origin. In the course of the past three weeks sugar has almost doubled in value and all stocks are held subject to war prices. This is due to the fact that both Russia and Germany are the chief producers of sugar in the world and both are export countries whence the remainder of Europe draws its supply of sweetening and practically all the beet seed of the world comes from these lands. At the first announcement of hostilities it was evident that a famine was bound to ensue with war opening on the threshold of the sugar campaign, which implied the loss of one of the most profitable crops cultivated by Europe. The extent of the sugar industry is not fully understood in this country, where people have been deceived into believing we rank as one of the great sugar producing nations of the earth. This is far from being a fact, as statistics show that the production of sugar in the United States and dependencies is less than one-eighth of the total world's production. The figures stagger belief, but they are of a magnitude to convince any one of the reason for the sharp advance. The world's production of sugar in 1912 aggregated 35,498,809,920 pounds, of which the United States, Porto Rico, Philippines and Hawaii yielded only 4,298,165,504 pounds, subdivided as follows: United States, cane sugar, 723,840,000 pounds; beet sugar, 1,199,000,000 pounds; Hawaii, 1,205,465,510 pounds; Porto Rico, 734,289,872 pounds, and the Philippines, 435,570,122 pounds. Louisiana produces more cane sugar and molasses than all the other states combined, but this year it may not come up to the average, owing to the number of planters who refused to continue in an industry that had been thrown open to the pauper competition of the world.

In Nevada the prospects look exceedingly good for operating the factory at Fallon. The local concern is fortunate enough to have on hand enough seed to produce a large crop. Just how fortunate they are is indicated by the numerous offers they have had for the seed on hand. They have been offered no less than $5,000 more than they paid for the seed. Ira Kent, receiver of the sugar factory, tells of one factory at Anaheim, California, that succeeded, after much effort, in procuring 400 sacks of beet seed at a price 500 per cent greater than the usual market price of seed. The requirements of this factory for a season's crop is 900 sacks.

The refineries have adopted strict regulations in regard to the sale of sugar. They will fill orders only at the price prevailing at the time the order is received by them. Ordinarily they give the customer the advantage of the market on the day his order is mailed. Sales are not made for speculative purposes, the refineries refusing to fill orders for more than the purchaser's usual requirements.

Nevada should be warned against the wiles of California produce buyers who never fail to use their power to excite prejudice against the products of this state. It is not so very long ago that California declared Nevada potatoes unfit for consumption. Now they are condemning shipments of alfalfa on the ground that the Nevada hay is infected with thistle seed. The best way is to avoid California markets as you would a pesthouse and ship to places where they give a man a square deal.

The foolkiller should get his gun and go after that Illinois statesman who wants this country to butt into the war in the orient by protesting against the occupation of China by either Germans or Japs. Some men never know when they have a good thing and would like to stir up trouble. A good way of treating such meddlers would be to send them to the firing line.

The report that Jack Johnson has volunteered in the French army proves to be incorrect. He will leave the war to the white hopes.

Washoe county advertises there is plenty of room in the Reno jail, but we do not hear of any rush of applicants for spare rooms.

AMUSEMENTS

BUTLER THEATER.

"Home, Sweet Home," John Howard Payne's Immortal Song Visualized in Six Part Griffith Reliance Production.

A photodrama of beautiful motive, of exquisite treatment and exposition, imbued with the personality of the brilliant D. W. Griffith (producer). "Home, Sweet Home" ranks among the highest screen productions. It is in the highest sphere a masterpiece. One does not have to state that there is a "beautiful motive" and leave it to the imagination. The immortal works of man make him akin to God partaking of and participating in the divine purpose so far as the world is concerned. The splendid motive of Payne, as idealized by Griffith, and leading up to the composition of the imperishable song. The first episode has a delightful comedy offering that is sure to please the most exacting one. Mae Marsh as "Apple Pie Mary" will fascinate you as completely as if she were before you in person. The spirit of the whole play, as well as the theme, will appeal to the purest sensibilities. "Poetic drama" seems to designate the production. This is meant in high praise. Drama of noble purpose that is poetic in spirit and artistic in presentation tends to make life lovely and wonderful to give it that stimulus which leads to progress. "Home, Sweet Home," an enchantment of the screen.

This picture is composed of 25 picked stars featuring Blanche Sweet, Lillian Gish, F. A. Turner, Courtney Foote and Donald Crisp. First show starts at 7 p. m., second at 8:30 p. m. Admission, adults, 25c; children, 10c. —Adv.
